

Tissue Paper Jar Lanterns

Inspired by all the beautiful wild flowers blooming at the moment we've made a lovely tea light lantern from a jar and some tissue paper. It looks really beautiful all lit up. We're using a battery powered tea light in ours, if you want to use a real candle remember to never leave it unattended when it's lit and make sure it's not near anything flammable.

You will need:

- Tissue paper (we've used blue and green for the background and pinks and yellows for the flowers)
- Glass jar (washed and dried)
- Glue (PVA works well)
- Scissors
- Tea light

Step 1.

Cut or rip up your tissue paper for the background into small pieces. We're making a simple design with sky, grass and flowers but you can use your imagination and either make your own design or just use a riot of colours!

Step 2.

Cut out flower shapes from your other bits of tissue paper.

Step 3.

Cover part of the jar with PVA glue and then start layering up your background tissue paper onto the glue. Work around the jar until the whole jar is covered.

Step 4.

Add spots of glue where you want your flowers and then carefully stick them on top.

Step 5.

Give the whole jar a coat of PVA and allow to dry.

Step 6.

Add in your tea light, light it up and enjoy! Have fun and don't forget to share
